An Interview with Arab Sunke-Charm-ers-Their Singular Proceedings and In-difference to Poison.

In a recent volume entitled Life in th Descrit occurs this remarkable chapter:

Descrit occurs this remarkable chapter:

These performers consisted of seven Beai-Schnidad Arabs from Ainad, a town lying 103 leagues to the east of Mareb. Six of them were playing upon flutes when we came up, but on being requested by Aou Bekrel-Braud to exhibit their serpents to us, they consented with alacrity.

Having made their arrangements, all seven commenced by putting up their hands as if holding books, while they murmured in concert a prayer addressed to Sidna Aisser, the patron of snake-charmers. This invocation linished, the six musicians took their flutes and began to play—the chief charmer spinand began to play—the chief charmer spin-ning with great velocity, in a kiad of wild dance, round the palm-leaf backet covered with goat-skin, in which the serpents were with gost-skin, in which the serpents were placed.

Suddenly the dancer stopped, and, plunging his hand into the basket, drew out of it an asp, or busks, which he whirled about, twining and untwining it, until it looked like a band of greenish yellow sitk. He then wreathed the serpent round his head like a tarban, dancing all the time, while the reptile remained where he had placed it, appearing to accommodate itself to the movements ing to accommodate itself to the movements and will of the dancer.

The ssp was then placed upon the ground, from which it reared itself perpendicularly—the pesition of attack taken by it when its haunts are invaded—waving its body from right to left, in time with the music of the finess.

Then the dancer wheeling more and more rspidly in diminishing circles, again plunged his hand into the basket, and again draw his hand into the basket, and again drew from it successively four horned vipers, or lefass. These reptiles, livelier and less docile than the asp, kept themselves half coiled, with their heads slanting forward, ready to strike, as they followed, with gleaming eyes, the motions of the charmer, on whom they darted, with open jaws, when he came within reach, lanching their bodies with wonderful swiftness, while their tails appeared as if fixed to the ground, and then again winding themselves into coils.

again winding themselves into coils. again winding themselves into coils.

The dancer parried with his abbaye, these assaults upon his bare legs, the vipers appearing to impregnate the gamment with their venom. He then seized one of them behind the head, dancing round and round, and calling in a loud voice upon his patron eaint.

Opening the powerful, elastic jaws of the reptile with a stick, he showed us its fangs, from which cozed a whitish, oily substance. Then he held his arm near the snake, which struck him immediately, upon which he re-doubled his contortions, as if in an agony of pain, calling all the time upon Sidna Aisser, the reptile still continuing to strike, until he withdrew his arm and showed us the blood trickling from it.

Replacing the viper on the ground, the charmer now applied his lips to the wound, squeezing it between his teeth, and still keeping up his dance, while the flutes went faster and faster, until at length he stopped from sheer exhaustion.

As I was confident that this man was an arrant juggler, and that the poison had been extracted from the reptile, I asked him to let me handle it.

"Art thou a serpent-charmer?" asked the Beni-Shiddad, "hast thou a faith implicit in the power of Sidna Aisser?"
"Neither the one nor the other," re-

"Neither the one nor the other," replied I.

"Should the serpent strike thee, then thy hour is come," rejoined he. "Bring hither a hen, or some other living animal, and I will prove the truth of my words."

Unfortunately for itself, a wretched cat happened to be at hand. It was brought to the charmer, who caused the viper to strike it; immediately after which poor puss fell into convulsions, which lasted for a few seconds, staggered about for a moment, and then fell, stiff and dead, soon after which its nose and eyes assumed a blueish hue.

I need scarcely add that this experiment

I need scarcely add that this experiment cured me of my trantic desire to play with the horned viper.

Of these facts I speak from ocular ex-perience; but, although I have investigated the matter closely, I have never yet met with any person who could propound a sat-isfactory theory upon the subject. I have applied to the charmers themselves, and to the people about them, offering money in exchange for their secret, but invariably d me of my frantic desire to play

"If we die not from the bite of the serpents," they would say, with an appearance of imperturbable faith, "it is owing to the protection of Sidna Aisser. Superstition alone can satisfy the Arab for this curious fact of the snake-charmers. To me, who am not given to the supernatural, it seems that these men must possess a knowledge of certain herbs, the juice of which neutralizes the effect of the venom; and that they hold this remedy in their mouths while sucking the wound, thus ob-

There has been a story in circulation that a man fired at Napoleon III, at Toulon, when he was on his way home from Algeris, but is pronounced a canard. The Emperor has been remarkably free from dangers of this kind for some time. The last time he was fired at was early in 1858, when the Orsini affair occurred, and so many lives were lost through the Italian's want of skill. He fired a whole battery, as it were, at the Emperor, and still managed to miss him; and yet he did not miss his aim, which was to drive Napoleon III into a war with Austria, which broke out in little more than a year later. Had Orsini never assailed the Emperor, the THE WAR WITH AUSTRIA THE EFFECT OF broke out in little more than a year later. Had Orsini never assailed the Emperor, the Emperor never would have assailed Austria. Perhaps if some other Italian gentleman, from Mantua, or Verona, or Venice, or some other place yet under the dominion of Austria, were to vote the Emperor a target, and take a shy at him, the redemption of Venetia would be much hastened.

A MOST EXTRAORDINARY AFFAIR-A Woman Weds Two Husbands, and Elopes with Both while they are her Lovers .- The London Court Journal says:

Court Journal says:

A divorce case, under peculiar circumstances, is likely to attract public attention. A lady, belonging to a distinguished family, long hesitated between two eligible suitors; she at length selected one of them, and was married, but soon fancied she had made a wrong selection, and eloped with her rejected suitor. Proceedings were instituted, and she was among the first to avail herself of Sir Cresswell Cresswell's process of "Freedom made Easy," by marrying her guilty partner; but she seems scarcely to know her own mind, for she has since re-eloped with her first husband. Casuists are puzzled to her first husband. Casuists are puzzled to decide which she may be disposed to like

THE FERRICH PRINCE'S AMUSEMENT.—The Prince Imperial of France is said to be a backward child in the bands of teachers, but very apt at catching ideas when left to him-self. His chief amusement consists in acting as conductor upon a miniature rallway, con-structed in his own garden. He conducts his little friends from station to station with the greatest delight.

A shrill shrick of agony followed the double report, and I just escaped a ferocious blow aimed at me with his trunk, being, fortunately, out of reach. I ran round to the back of the rock before I veutured to look over my shoulder, when finding that he was not on me, I releaded as quick as possible; this done I felt secure, and sgain approached the scene of action. I found my plan had proved completely successful, for my antagonist was completely disabled.

My gun (which was a double two-ounce smoothbore, by Westley Richards) had been heavily loaded, having about six drachms of powder in each barrel; and the bones of the foot were so completely shattered by the double shot he could not put it to the ground, and away time he attempted to make a tree. double shot he could not put it to the ground, and every time he attempted to make a step forward he fell heavily. He must have suffered intense agony, for he uttered most piteous cries between his bursts of rage. As I approached he strove to charge, with a shriek of despair, but he fell heavily to the ground, and as he was rising to his knees, I stepped up and discharged both barrels into the hollow over the trunk, the contents of which penetrating the brain, he fell, "never to rise again." to rise again."

VALUABLE HINTS TO LOVERS OF CAISSA. Under this title, in the London Chess Players' Chronicle, Capt. Kennedy gives the following hints to chess players: When you see clearly that your game is past all redemption lost, advisedly put your Queen or some other piece en prize; and when it has been taken, after a quick exclamation of surprise and sorrow, begin to replace the men, observing, with an air of tranquil resignation, that that is the way you lose all your games. N. R.—Should your lose all your games. N. B.—Should your opponent be so rude as to insinuate a doubt that such has not been the case in this particular instance, be afflicted with a sudder

Take opportunity when you can to inveigle some celebrated player, Mr. Gambit Pawn, for instance, into an even game with you—"in a merry sport," as it were. It is very likely that, being overweeningly conscious of his superiority, as such people generally are, he will play carelessly—and you may win. If you do, take precious care not to play with him any more; but go up and down the town, proclaiming your achievement every-where with trumpet tongue. Whenever Mr. Gambit Pawn's name is afterward mentioned in your presence, lose no time in making the your presence, lose no time in making the company aware that you won every game you ever played with him, and received no odds. Your reputation as a strong player will thus be honorably advanced, while your character for strict veracity remains unim-

THE FRENCH EMPRESS'S MATERNAL SENSIBILITY—The Lovely Eugenie Bathedin Tears. A foreign paper gives an instance of what it calls the "maternal sensibility of the French Empress." While at Ajaccio, she remained for some time alone in her carriage under a triumphal arch, the Emperor being absent, inspecting some new forts. Some hundreds of the peasants who had assembled, formed a circle at a distance round the carriage, but her Majesty made a sign with her hand, and in a moment a compact mass was close around her. "Do you come from far?" asked her Majesty, in Italian, addressing one of them. "Oh, yes, madame," replied the man, who appeared astonished to hear the sovereign speaking, and particto hear the sovereign speaking, and partic-ularly in his ewn language, "it is four days' journey; but we have all come, leaving only journey; but we have all come, leaving only the women and the old behind us." "Oh, madame," said another peasant, "why did you not bring the boy?" "You love him then, do you?" said the Empress; "you would like to see him; if so, there he is," and taking off a broach which contained a portrait of the Prince Imperial, she held it out to them. A thousand hands were held out to seize it, and it was kissed by every one with the greatest delight. This scene was too much for the feelings of the Empress, who forgot the sovereign in the mother, and when the Emperor returned she was lying back in the carriage weeping at the remembrance of her

A Valuable Dog—A Canine Supporter of a Household.—The keeper of Egg Rock Lighthouse, in Massachusetts Bay lives upon a barren rock, but supports his family handsomely and leads a jolly sort of existence. A Boston paper tells this story of his chief assistant, a remarkably intelligent dog:

One of the most valuable and esteemed of Mr. Taylor's family of pets is his dog, the guardian of his establishment and the protector of his children. This dog is very fond of the water, and enjoys himself greatly in swimming off among the breakers when the sea is rough. In the winter season, as the Swampscott fishermen come in from their trips, they will often lash two or three good-sized codfish to a stick of wood and throw them over for the benefit of Mr. Taylor.

The dog, who is always on the lookout will notice the proceeding, and forthwith swim to and bring in the prize, though the weather be ever so cold, and the fish often a mile from the rock. In thick foggy weather, he will state himself was a second to the prize of he will station himself upon the seaward side of the rock, and upon the slightest sound of an approaching vessel, which he can distinguish at a great distance, he will set up an incessant barking, which has often proved a warning when a light could not be seen.

A VENERABLE BUREAU. - A venerable bureau was recently exhibited at a town fair, in Connecticut, which was brought to this country at its early settlement, and is still preserved in the same family. A chair that has been in one family 150 years, and another some 200 years old, were also exhibited, as well as a pair of infant's shoes, that have been worn by three generations, and are still in good preservation.

The statistics of the present year shew a decrease in the number of acres of grain planted, as compared with 1850, of 15,223 acres, is root crops, a decrease of 29,145 acres in the last year, and in the value of live stock, a decrease of £1,528,360, or nearly $7,900,660.

THE UNCONSCIOUS DESTINY OF MAN,-In a recent sermon Henry Ward Beecher said : The thread that goes into the loom does The thread that goes into the loom does not know what it wants, or where it goes, or what it is forming. It follows blindly the shuttle, and comes out at last on the surface of the shining silk, in vine, and leaf, and blossom, or some figure. So we are being led in a way and by an influence which at the time we can not interpret. If we have faith that God leads us, and follow him implicitly, these things which we can not understand, work themselves out in our life.

We are in bondage of old superstition, and the worship of nine hundred and ninety-nine churches in a thousand is yet tinged with the somberness illustrative of the heathen element of fear. The lightness, the gaiety, the cheer of true worship, is but little known among men. What the bilarity of children is, breaking away from masters and schools, and romping home to over-power the household with joy, such is to be the worship of God's children. The name the worship of God's children. The name of Father ought not to make any man tremble that is a child.

The work which God appoints for every man, is an indestructible work, whose foundstions are in earth, but whose superstructure goes up in Heaven; and it is to be "eternal in the heavens." There is nothing that man does out of himself, however closious it may be that can be compared to glorious it may be, that can be compared to that work which is going on his own soul,

Bonners Inadmissible to a Ball—The Disposition the Wearers Made of Them.—The Semaphore of Marseilles relates the following incident, which is said to have oc-curred at the ball given to their Majesties at Chateau Borelli:

opened, two ladies, accompanied by two gentlemen, and duly provided with tickets, presented themselves for admission. The adies were elegantly attired in white dresses and handsome ornaments, but unfortunately they had not conformed to established etithey had not conformed to established eti-quette, as far as regarded their head-dress, for they wore bonnets. These appendages were, it is true, of the most light and ele-gant kind, and ornamented with marabout-feathers, but they were considered, notwith-standing, inadmissible. The stewards at the door expressed their regret in the po-litest terms, but, as their instructions were positive on the subject they would not allitest terms, but, as their instructions were positive on the subject, they would not allow themselves to be softened by the entreaties of the ladies, who retired in great dismay. An old proverb says, that when a woman determines on doing a thing, nothing can prevent her, and so it was in this case. The ladies, inspired with a sudden idea, went among some trees which were growing near, and, taking off the objectionable articles of and, taking off the objectionable articles of dress, despoiled them of their feathers, which they speedily transferred to their hair. The they speedily transferred to their hair. The question next arose what should they do with the bonnets, which were too pretty to throw away. Feminine invention here again came to their aid, for, lifting their ample crinolines, they safely attached the discarded head-dresses within their ample folds, where they were completely unobserved. Thus newly equipped, they presented themselves, and were duly admitted.

WALTER SCOTT AND HIS TIPSY SERVANT-An Irishman's Humor Illustrated .- I recently had the following anecdote related to me about Sir Walter Scott: He once had an Irishman working for him who was a great drunkard, and who often neglected the work that Sir Walter set him to do. One merning while engaged in his library labor, word was brought him that his man had returned, after a two-days' spree. Sir Walter dashed his pen down on his deak, and in great anger ordered the son of Erin te be sent to him immediately. Pat entered, like humbleness personlied, and Sir Walter poured out the vials of his wrath:

"You unthankful deg," said he, "here I have been putting up with your misdoings, and forgiven you from time to time; yet no sooner are you in my good graces, than you take advantage of me. But this is the last time, sir; we must part!"
"Well," said the gentleman from Ireland, "If we must part, I'm very sorry, and hope no ill will happen ye; but may I ask, where are you goin' to?" He had another trial.

The Genuire Snor a Fenale.—A snob is usually a person of the feminine gender, and may be known by several characteristics. She is polite to her superiors; arrogant with those of lower station; fawns on the rich; snubs the poor, and pretends not to know her own mether when she chances to meet the old lady in unfashionable clothes. She has plenty of brass and few brains; and is always uneasy from a suspicion that her intrinsic vulgarity may fail to be hidden by her outward gentility.

THE INFLUENCE OF HOPE AND WORE.— Despair never made a Christian, a scholar, or a hero; never a Paul or a Columbus or a Washington. Hence our work must be botter than postry, more substantive than rainbows; it must repose, serene and invinci-ble, on the adamantine basis of truth and soberness.

Lord Russell's note to James Hudson, British Minister to Turin, expresses the fear that the attack against the Roman States and Kingdom of Naples may lead to an attack upon the possessions of Austria in Venetin.

If the King of Piedmont was not at lib erty to accept the preliminaries of Villa-franca and the treaty of Zurich, now that he has pledged his royal word, he is not at liberty to attack a nation with which he promised to live in peace and friendship. Should such an event occur, Italy would are in he exposed to all the changes of moore again be exposed to all the chances of uncertainty.

Garibaldi had consented to a deputation of Venetians publishing a journal in Napies to excite the people of Venetia to a general rising. He told them the present war was the only national one which could give them a country. Our battles are so many marches in our progress to the Alps, on the summit of which alone we will stop. He authorized them to act as an association for the purpose of raising a subsidy for all kinds of insurrectional war-making.

The King's soldiers at Gaeta had demol ished the residence of the French Consul-during his absence, under the pretense that there was connivance between him and Garibaldi.
